Letter from Geo. Alfred Townsend.

Correspondence of the Cleveland Leader

WASHINGTON, April 17.

Only Impeachment, and that continually; chiefly Butler, and that very much—this is Washington at this time.

Sitting in the gallery all day, reading a book between times, when the wrath of counsel and the pith of wit is suspended, or picking out odd or pretty faces in the galleries with an opera-glass, or writing notes loosely upon the roof of a hat—this is how I make out five hours a day, in the sultry atmosphere of the Senate Chamber.

There is always somebody new; a new bit of gossip or surprise is developed every day; but it is rare that any appeal to high nature is given, or any suggestion to send the mind spinning into the realms of the abstract. The temptation is always a growing one, here, to be a tale-bearer. All these people were statesmen when we went to school; now they are town-characters.

CONCLUSION OF THE EVIDENCE.

When Mr. Evarts announced on Saturday at five o'clock that the evidence on the President's part was all in, a sensation was made in the chamber. Then, everybody was at liberty to form a conclusion as to the verdict, and the conclusion was everywhere, guilty! Guilty, at least, of violating the tenure of office act in the case of E. M. Stanton. Whether guilty in intention, guilty in design of employing force, or what not, still guilty of the act. And the act was a violation of law, a minature usurpation, showing that the man had incipient though cowardly designs of resisting law by brute force of soldiery. His will failed and his instrument was weak, but he tried to make a direct contest between himself and the legislature of the people, and this is what no President before him ever attempted.

Friends of the President fall back upon the idea that Stanton was Mr. Lincoln's appointee and not Mr. Johnson's, in vain. Every fair mind said; "This is an after thought, not considered before the act and not the cause of it."

No miracle of eloquence in the ensuing argument can change this verdict. Little of a partisan, and far from admiring many of the extremists in this trial, I say to you that the President is proven guilty of the main charge, and already convicted in the estimation of two-thirds of the people and the jury. His conviction is for the people's good, for the safeguard of Democrats as well as Republicans. Time will endorse it—It will be a stern evidence of how keenly the people were awake to the preciousness of their liberties, and how positive were the legislators in arraigning and punishing the usurper.

I hope that this man will be promptly removed from office. I hope, if it be constitutional, that he will not be disqualified from holding office in future. Let him go back to the people, and learn of them the duties of citizenship. Show him that the great party which set him aside as a querulous and crooked obstruction, can be magnanimous like Uncle Toby to the fly, saying: "There is room enough for thee and me. If the people reinstate thee in any place, let them be so unwise. In any place we do not fear thee."

THE CABINET IN COURT.

Wm. H. Seward sat on the floor of the Senate on Friday. His small figure and slim head, the latter covered with smooth gray and white hair, attracted all attention. Simon Cameron graciously gave him a chair, and Mr. Bingham addressed him with words of welcome and assurance as to his health. Then Thaddeus Stevens engaged in conversation with Mr. Seward. Two physiques ripe for death were they, but Seward looked the older, having not the advantage of a dark wig, like Mr. Stevens. The latter is a grand looking old man always, but on this occasion his firm mouth, strong brow, and habitual sternness and cynicism, gave him great advantage over Seward's irregular and weak face, which showed many facile lines, as of ready wits, but not of deep principles. Seward has always seemed to me to be a literary man entrusted with statesmanship. His weakness are all those of a professional writer. He is fond of talk, of sentimentalizing, of good wine and frequent rich food, of riding, flattery and company, and he always has his leading speeches and State papers written out, manifolded, and forwarded to the press in abundant time to print them without error or abridgment. It was in this way that he lost position in politics, loving to dream of empire more than the abstract truths of freedom, and too indolent at his age (nearly seventy) to join an aggressive party again. He preferred to make fast the history he had lived, and committing himself to the negative platform of the Philadelphia Convention, he finds himself with scarcely a plank to drift upon.

Fred. Seward, his son, is a compact, wiry, small man of easy address and pleasant manners, without the brilliancy of his father, but with more business method.

Secretary Welles came into Court also, and testified through his spectacles. Spectacles, you may observe, often improve the face of living men, but they are no great adornments to martyrdom. Stanton, as Jupiter, looks well in glasses, but John Knox, dying at the stake in green glasses, is simply goggly and virtuous. Of course, John Knox did not wear glasses, or prudently removed them at the stake. Mr. Welles, who may be considered as in the flames of martyrdom, wore gold glasses, and we all found it impossible to suffer with him.

Mr. Welles looked to have some dignity, apart from the dignity of mere sleepiness, which is always admirable in old age. Whitcomb is no word for his beard, so superlatively bleached that an Albino might envy it. Said beard is short, downy, and of very healthy growth, so that with his clear, pink skin he looks like a Persian or a Syrian. His hair, clean as the combed wool of Mary's little lamb, suggests also, with the innocent eyes of the old gentleman, the patriotic rhyme:

Johnson had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow,
And everywhere that Johnson went
The lamb is sure to go,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

Mr. Welles testified with great volubility—so fast, that he overran Butler's order to halt. His son, a pleasant young fellow, also testified.

Mr. Randall looks like a Mormon elder. Baldness covers him like a garment. On the flanks and rear of his deep head, a crescent of glossy, black ringlets falls. He is of good height, erect, direct of talk, and he engaged in pitched battle with General Butler at the latter's request. Randall scarcely suffered at the hands of Butler, having a good deal of spirit and clear-headedness, and he refused to be interpreted by Butler's ingenious process of interpolating a statement into a question and getting a witness to consent to it by silence. The rules of evidence are only just where lawyers are charitable. To fall into Butler's hands where he has all the power, is to get into a bullpit with a red shirt on your back. The manner of General Butler is so merciless, and often so offensive, that the spectators are apt to grow indignant. He refuses to let a question be answered except by yea or nay, and yea or nay often does not tell all the truth. If to develope this whole truth the President's counsel interrogate, General Butler objects. He has objected to four-fifths of all the questions put upon this trial, while you can count on your fingers the questions that Evarts and Curtis have objected to. It is to be regretted that, with his continuous brilliancy in this trial, General Butler has not observed the golden mean between positiveness and persecution. He dignified General Thomas by upbraiding his foolish gray head. He has received three rebukes from three parties to this trial. Reverdy Johnson, a Senator; Mr. Evarts an advocate; and the Chief Justice, presiding.

GENERAL BUTLER'S FAMILY.

A man so potent and yet so terrible looks like a lion lying down with lambs when you see him daily, after the adjournment of the Court, come down the Senate stairs, wearing an old slouched, high crowned, soft hat, no overcoat, and no gloves. At the bottom of the stairs in a sort of open chariot, wait his wife and his daughter Blanche. Mrs. Butler is a dark-eyed, handsome, and very young-appearing lady, with a fine bodily carriage and much elegance of dress. Blanche Butler has dark auburn hair, fine expressive eyes, and a skin where the rose and lily blend. She wears generally a green silk dress. Her figure is like her mother's, slender and tall, and of course she looks no more like Gen. Butler than Desdemona like the Moor or Rigoletto like his child.

HAIL STORM GRAMMAR.

"What he done" is an elegant and familiar phrase of General Butler. "To who did you say it?" says the hot-livered Mr. Stanbery. We want a national grammarian. A fact is always more or less true by being ill said. The mal-pronunciation of a word in a sentence is almost as great an offense as to the perfect standard of truth as the perversion of a fact. Truth, like law, has its own tastes and phraseology. To say "what he done" is to tell a lie, because it is to affirm an impossibility. A man could not "done" anything, any more than he could "gone done" it.—Thus, Mr. Johnson is being impeached for false etymology and syntax. The same loose habit of expressing things which made him ridiculous, grew into a looseness of affirmation which made him unreliable. Form has its religion as reality as intention has it, and revenge themselves as lies.—About five sixths of the members of Congress speak in loose English, but I must not say that not more than one-sixth speak the truth.

INDIANS LOOKING AT WASHINGTON.

Rumors are abroad of new Indian hostilities. The grass will soon be green and the Braves will take up the war-hatchet. There is reason to believe that it is the people who are green, and the Pacific railroad companies that have offered up the war-hatchet. The American Indian is now the representative lobbyist. He is useful to send heavy freights in troops and subsistence across the unremunerative railways, and whenever the spring opens, the savage receives his cue, and the colored troops and a band of music, at $2,000 a man, are propelled across the plains. I have been trying to get at the bottom of these great railway muddles, but it is hard work. The biggest leak in the country now is not whisky, but railroad. Sixteen thousand dollars a mile, and twelve thousand eight hundred acres a mile are apt to figure high in a country of so magnificent distances, particularly when four vast trunk corporations are making poplar wood corduroy roads from the Mississippi to the Pacific.

SAULSBURY AND YATES.

These two devotees of Whitney's Inn, behind the Capitol, sit equi distant from the main aisle of the Senate, in such a way as to balance the count and each other. They are nearly of the same age and complexion, the black hair of both curls at the tips; Yates is the nattiest, Saulsbury the rotundest. Yates is smooth shaven, Saulsbury wears stumpy side whiskers. Yates looks sick, Saulsbury over-ripe. Saulsbury's countenance shows character and thoughtful prejudice; Yates' the feebleness of a man who puts things off, lives without method, and knows that his will is a corpse. Yates drinks whisky, Saulsbury brandy. Both were good and useful men, and their careers show that liquor is national, ruling, as the politicians say, "from the banks of the Brandywine to the prairies of the Mississippi."

OTHER SENATORS.

Charles Sumner's attitude during this trial has been of a very peculiar description. In all vital questions he has voted strictly with Howard and the ultra impeachers. In the smaller questions he has exhibited a handsome breadth of charity, even offering a resolution to admit all evidence on both sides without discussion. His vote is invariably given in semi-basso voice, and in this respect his only imitators are Thayer, of Nebraska, and Drake, of Missouri. Sumner is always carefully and plainly attired, his sallow face relieved by his glossy iron-gray hair. He is much beset for autographs, being, in the estimation of a good many people, the greatest statesman of the country. Mr. Drake looks like a Hebrew, wears gold glasses sometimes, to increase that illusion, and manifests more than any other Senator a decided bias on the trial. He is nervous, snappy, and over anxious to distinguish himself. Thayer is a courtly man, too prone to defend people whom he does not understand. He has a martial carriage and a keen eye. Fowler, the Senator from Tennessee, is said to be paying his addresses to the widow Stover, Mr. Johnson's daughter. He is himself a good-looking widower, with auburn hair, barber-frizzled, and of a very amiable and unobtrusive disposition. He was formerly a college professor. It may be noted that Mr. Johnson's offenses do not deter Radical Senators from wishing to marry his daughter.

Patterson, the President's son-in-law, who never appears beside his wife at Mr. Johnson's drawing rooms, is a bald, stout, carelessly dressed man, with a beer drinking look to him. His nose is red, and his expression is that of a hermetical benevolence, though he seldom walks or talks with anybody, and never seems to expect to be spoken to. It is a lonely place, this being an unpopular President's son-in-law, and Patterson is never loud, cynical or immodest. He is not Adonis, but he is sensible and still enough.

Morton of Indiana, one of the very ablest, if not the ablest, Senator on the Radical side, is a dark, blacksmith like man, with thick moustache and black goatee reaching down upon his breast. His round, strong, helmet-like skull is thinly covered with short black hair, but he is a little bald. He walks with a couple of canes, having been paralyzed.

Ross is a newspaper editor, elected by happy accident from Kansas in the moral reaction of that State against the six-shooting education of Jim Lane. Ross is a small, tidy, brown-haired, amiable man, of no particular tremendousness of character. He has a Roman nose, a brown goatee and a boyish love of ladies' society. It has been said here that he will vote for Mr. Johnson's acquittal, but nobody has a right to premise that.

Mr. Grimes is the "startlest" looking of all the Senators. He is like the Golden Farmer; a golden ruddiness like a pippin apple in his face. He is enclosed in a bird's nest of stiff hair, and is said to be the most amiable grumbler in Congress.
G. A. T.

The violets of our American forests are devoid of the heavy perfume of their English prototypes, but instead they posses a fresh odor of forests in spring that is as pleasant as, and perhaps more appropriate to their poetical reputation for modesty than the delicious and rather penetrating fragrance which is so charming on the kerchief, as violet ribbons are in the auburn hair of a blonde beauty.

Queen Victoria visited Earl Derby before his departure for Cannes. Anxiety for his health and a desire to honor as much as was in her power, a broken down man who has used himself up in her service, and who has been one of the bulwarks of the great tory party, a party which always had the sympathies of royalty, prompted this unusual proceeding of the Queen.

WASHINGTON.

Destitute Indians.

WASHINGTON, April 24.

Several communications were sent to the House of Representatives to-day from the Secretary of the Interior, enclosing official papers showing the immediate necessity for an appropriation to furnish supplies to destitute Indians.

Another Nomination for Secretary of War.

The President to-day withdrew the nomination of Thomas Ewing, Jr., as Secretary of War, by sending to the Senate the following communication:

To the Senate of the United States:

I have nominated John M. Schofield to be Secretary of the Department of War, in place of Edwin M. Stanton, to be removed.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS

Senate.

Impeachment Trial—Eighteenth Day.

WASHINGTON, April 24.

At the opening of the Court, Chief Justice Chase stated the first business was the order offered for consideration yesterday by Mr. Grimes, that the hour for meeting of the Senate shall be 12 o'clock. The order was adopted—21 against 13.

Mr. Edmunds offered an order to admit an official reporter to report the speeches on final deliberation of the Senate.

Objected to by Mr. Sumner. Went over under the rule.

Mr. Nelson resumed his speech and concluded his argument of yesterday in support of the proposition that no offences are impeachable except those which were deemed crimes and misdemeanors by the common law at the time the Constitution was formed.

Referring to that portion of Mr Boutwell's speech which illustrates the President's alleged perverse nature by his treatment of a gentleman who was to have been one of his counsel, Mr. Nelson made a statement that Judge Black withdrew from the case simply because the President refused to send vessels to seize Alta Vela, a refusal made on the ground of public duty, against the solicitations of friends and implied threats of enemies. Quoting expressions of Mr. Boutwell, that the advice given to the President by the Cabinet, was that of serfs, to their Lord offered in fear of losing their places, he reminded the Managers that they had put in evidence a message which showed that their friend, Mr. Stanton, had proffered the advice thus characterized, and that he now might cry "save me from my friends" if they made him out the servile serf.

Alluding briefly to the high commendation of the President written by Mr. Stanton in 1865, and to the strangeness of the fact that the President is only now impeached for offences against the defunct 39th Congress, Nelson proceeded to consider the articles of impeachment separately.

He said, in the first place, that there was a distinction made by both common and statute law between a crime and an attempt to commit a crime, and as the civil tenure bill relates only to actual removal from office, and as the President made none, the charges made in most of the articles fall. But aside from his objections, which, though technical, should still, he claimed, have weight, he would maintain three propositions, namely: That the Tenure-of-Office law is void; if it is not, Mr. Stanton's case is not covered by it, and that even if it is legal and applicable the President is not guilty of crime because he acted from laudable motives. He quoted at great length from debates on the formation of the Constitution and on the passage of the act of 1789, and from numerous legal authorities to show that the question of the President's power of removal was definately settled by the action of Congress at that time, and claimed, therefore, he had grounds for honestly forming the opinion on which he acted from the Constitutional requirement that the Attorney General is to furnish the President with opinions in writing, and the fact that such opinions are collected and bound by authority of Congress. Mr. Nelson argued that they have a quasi authorative character for the President's action. He then cited a large number of opinions in writing by various Attorney Generals since "the formation of the Government which place the same construction on the law of 1789 and express the same views regarding the power of removal as President Johnson.

He referred also, to the opinion of Mr. Jefferson as to the action of President Jackson, and to that of the Senate in expunging its resolution of censure on him, and then recapitulating the authorities and precedents for Mr. Johnson's course and policy, insisted that the presumption of honest intent was clearly made out. He next considered the position that Congress has by implication superior power to the Executive, and maintained that no greater powers were granted in that way to the Legislative than to the Executive branch of the Government At this point the Senate took a recess of 15 minutes.

On reassembling Mr. Nelson continued the citation of authorities in support of the President's views on the question of his power of removal, and proceeded to argue that the President had the same power to construe acts of Congress as Congress itself, and again supporting his views by numerous quotations. All the preceding arguments, he held, proved the Tenure of Office law unconstitutional and void. Mr. Nelson then elaborated the proposition that no charge can be maintained which does not allege criminal intent, which, he said, was not done except in the fifth article. In the course of his remarks he spoke of the friendly embrace of Mr. Stanton and Gen. Thomas, and the equal division of a spoonful of liquor between them, as the most remarkable exhibition of force on record. (Great laughter.) And while eulogizing the honesty and simplicity of Gen. Thomas, he explained his language to Mr. Burleigh and others as caused not only by pride of office, but by the enlivening effects of good liquor then consumed on the approaching suplemental battle. He proceeded to give a humorous and satirical account of the arrest and subsequent discharge of Gen. Thomas, ridiculing the idea that any one believed he desired to use force.

Passing to the consideration of the 2d and 3d articles, he adopted the statement in the President's answer as a sufficient reply to them. With regard to the 4th article, which charges conspiracy to obtain possession of the War Office by intimidation and threats, he claimed it was not covered by the act of 1861, which it was claimed had been violated. The 5th article, alleging intended employment by force, he held was not supported by testimony. The 6th article, in which a violation of the Tenure-of-Office law is also alleged, he considered he had disposed of by his argument as to the Constitutionality of that law. The 7th article was passed over with denials that the President's oath of office was violated by the offence charged. The 8th article he met by argument that the alleged endeavor to obtain possession of moneys in the War Department, even if made, was not in violation of the Civil Tenure law as stated. With reference to the 9th article, he held that the President was in the line of his duty when conferring with General Emory about the disposition of forces, and that no evidence whatever had been adduced to prove that his purpose in that interview was evil. Considering the 10th article he claimed it was based on the principles which underlie the Sedition Law, which ever since its passage had stunk in the nostrils of the American people. He held the President had followed the example of certain members of Congress in disregarding the amenities of expression, and was excusable for using strong language in reply to the abuse which had been heaped upon him.

Mr. Nelson insisted that the preservation of the right of the freedom of speech was indispensable to maintain our liberties, and after a brief consideration of the 11th article, which he said was sufficiently answered by his remarks concerning the preceding article, he referred to the charge of Mr. Boutwell, that the President wished to control the elections in Southern States, and asked how that could be possible with officers designated by Congress in command and exercising controll over all that region.

In conclusion he reminded the Senate that troublesand confiscation usually followed the exercise of revolutionary or Constitutional power in the deposition of Kings and rulers of the people, and implored them to so perform the high duties now devolving upon them as to merit the approbation of their consciences, their countrymen and their God.

The Court and Senate then at 4:45 adjourned.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Titusville Seminary and Soldiers' Orphan School OF THE INDUSTRIAL PLAN FOR BOYS AND GIRLS—This Institution, opened for the admission of soldiers' orphans, on the 24 day of January last, will admit a limited number of private pupils on and after Monday, the 11th of May.

The design of the School is to combine on a systematic basis, hand and intellectual culture. In connection with the ordinary course of study, each pupil is expected to devote two hours per day to manual labor at such a time that it will not interfere with school duties. Boys will be thoroughly instructed in one or more of the following employments, viz: Farming and gardening, type setting, shoe making, and general work around the Institution.

Girls will receive instruction in plain and fancy needlework and operating on sewing and knitting machines, and in general household duties. Other branches of industry will be introduced as the interests of the school may require.

The course of study will embrace besides the common English branches, instruction in the Natural Sciences, History and Languages, both ancient and modern, Vocal and Instrumental Music and Drawing.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

PETROLEUM MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE MORNING HERALD, TITUSVILLE, April 24, 1868—11 P. M.

Under a further advance in the Pittsburgh market, and a general better feeling in the other oil markets, the demand became stronger to day, and there was considerable activity. In several instances prices a shade higher than those of yesterday and the day previous, were obtained. The market is much firmer, and although sales have not been effected at an advance at all points, yet, from the firmness with which the sellers are holding and from the offers that have been made, an appreciation may be fairly quoted, of from five to ten cents from the quotations of yesterday. The sales made at the wells were: 1000 barrels on the Atkinson Farm, Upper Cherry Run, for the Eastern market, on private terms; 100 barrels on Bull Run, for the local market at $2 75; 2000 barrels on Upper Cherry Run for the Pittsburgh market on private terms. The following sales were made delivered; 1000 barrels at Titusville from Church Run, last evening, for the Baltimore market at $2 85; eight car loads at Petroleum Centre, for the Cleveland market at $3 00; three car loads at Miller for the Boston market at $2 85; six car loads at Titusville for the New York market at $2 85. At points north of Petroleum Centre offers were made at $2 85, and toward the close at $2 90 for delivery on the cars. At these points sellers were asking $3 00. At Petroleum Centre $3 00 was the general offering price, and $3 10 the price asked. At Upper Cherry Run sales were effected at $2 70 during the morning, and in the afternoon offers were made at $2 72½@2 75 without finding sellers.

At Oil City ordinary gravities could have been sold at $3 40 on broad gauge cars We quote at $3 40@3 45 delivered on broad gauge cars. At Tarr Farm a sale of 1000 barrels is reported at $3 00 on the cars.

We quote.

GERMAN BITTERS.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,

AND

Hoofland's German Tonic.

The Great Remedies for all Diseases

OF THE

LIVER, STOMACH OR DIGESTIVE ORGANS.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS

Is composed of the pure juices (or, as they are medically termed, Principles) of Roots, Herbs and Barks, making a preparation, highly concentrated and entirely free from alcoholic admixture of any kind.

Hoofland's German Tonic

Is a combination of all the ingredients of the Bitters, with the purest quality of Santa Cruz Rum Orange, &c., making one of the most pleasant and agreeable remedies ever offered to the public. Those preferring a Medicine free from Alcoholic admixture, will use

Hoofland's German Bitters.

Those who have no objection to the combination of the Bitters, as stated, will use

Hoofland's German Tonic.

They are both equally good, and contain the same medicinal virtues, the choice between the two being a mere matter of taste, the tonic being the most palatable.

The stomach, from a variety of causes, such as Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, etc., is very apt to have its functions deranged. The Liver, sympathizing so closely as it does with the Stomach, then becomes affected, the result of which is that the patient suffers from several or more of the following diseases.

CONSTIPATION, FLATULENCE, INWARD PILES, FULNESS OF BLOOD TO THE HEAD, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, NAUSEA, HEARTBURN, DISGUST FOR FOOD, FULNESS OR WEIGHT IN THE STOMACH, SOUR ERUCTATIONS, SINKING OR FLUTTERING AT THE PIT OF THE STOMACH, SWIMMING OF THE HEAD, HURRIED OR DIFFICULT BREATHING, FLUTTERING AT THE HEART, CHOKING OR SUFFOCATING SENSATIONS WHEN IN A LYING POSTURE, DIMNESS OF VISION, DOTS OR WEBS BEFORE THE SIGHT, DULL PAIN IN THE HEAD, DEFICIENCY OF PERSPIRATION, YELLOWNESS OF THE SKIN AND EYES, PAIN IN THE SIDE, BACK, CHEST, LIMBS, ETC., SUDDEN FLUSHES OF HEAT, BURNING IN THE FLESH, CONSTANT IMAGINING OF EVIL AND GREAT DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS

The sufferer from these diseases should exercise the greatest caution in the selection of a remedy for his case, for chasing only that which he is assured from his investigations possesses and inquiries merit, is skilled, is free from injurious ingredients, and has established for itself a reputation for the cure of these diseases. In this connection we would submit those well-known remedies—

Hoofland's German Bitters,

AND

Hoofland's German Tonic.

PREPARED BY Dr. C. M. JACKSON,

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Twenty-two years since they were first introduced into this country from Germany, during which time they have undoubtedly performed more cures, and benefited suffering humanity to a greater extent, than any other remedies known to the public.

These remedies will effectually cure Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Chronic or Nervous Dyspepsia, Chronic Debility, Chronic Diarrhea, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all Disorders arising from a Disordered Liver, Stomach or DEBILITY.

RESULTING FROM ANY CAUSE WHATEVER; PROSTRATION OF THE SYSTEM, INDUCED BY SEVERE LABOR, HARDSHIPS, EXPOSURE, FEVERS, &c.

There is no medicine extant equal to these remedies in such cases. A tone and vigor is imparted to the whole system, the appetite is strengthened, food is enjoyed, the stomach digests promptly, the blood is purified, the complexion becomes sound and healthy, the yellow tinge is eradicated from the eyes, a bloom is given to the cheeks, and the weak and nervous invalid becomes a strong and healthy being.

PERSONS ADVANCED IN LIFE,

And feeling the hand of time weighing heavily upon them, with all its attendant ills, will find in the use of this BITTERS, or the TONIC, an elixir that will instil new life into their veins, restore in a measure the energy and ardor of more youthful days, build up their shrunken forms, and give health and happiness to their remaining years.

NOTICE.

It is a well-established fact that fully one-half of the female population are self-confessed invalids; or, to use their own expression, "they feel weak, languid, dead of all energy, extremely nervous, and have no appetite.

To this class of persons the BITTERS, or the TONIC, is especially recommended.

WEAK AND DELICATE CHILDREN

Are made strong by the use of either of these remedies. They will cure every case of MARASMUS, without fail.

Thousands of certificates have accumulated in the hands of the proprietor, but space will allow of the publication of but a few. Those, it will be observed, are men of note and of such standing that they must be believed.

TESTIMONIALS.

HON. GEO. W. WOODWARD,

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pa., writes.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16, 1867.

"I find 'Hoofland's German Bitters' a good tonic, useful in digestive organs in cases of nervous debility, and action in the eye

Yours, tr'ly, GEO. W. WOODWARD."

HON. JAMES THOMPSON,

Judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, April, 23, 1866.

"I consider 'Hoofland's German Bitters' a valuable medicine in case of attacks of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it. Yours, with respect, JAMES THOMPSON."

FROM Rev. JOSEPH H. KENNARD, D. D.

Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.

DR. JACKSON—Dear Sir—I have been frequently requested to connect my name with recommendations of different kinds of medicine, but regarding the practice as out of my appropriate sphere, I have declined; but in all cases with a clear proof in various instances and my own family, particularly in the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course, to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very beneficial to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully, J. H. KENNARD, Eighth, below Coates Street.

FROM Rev. E. D. FENDALL,

Assistant Editor of Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.

I have derived decided benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic, to all who are suffering from general debility or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours, truly, E. D. FENDALL.
